BIG TANKS FIGHT TO SAVE STALINGRAD

Great Scrap Campaign Starts September 30

SCHOOL; TRADE HOLIDAY SET FOR OPENING

DOOR TO DOOR COLLECTION

County Quota Set At 2100 Tons For Rest Of Year — 400 Tons Present Count

Scrap campaign of greater magnitude and greater importance than any ever before organized in Circleville and Pickaway county will get under way next Wednesday when a community project which will cover every home and will call for participation of every man, woman and child will be started.

The scrap drive this time is not merely a request for cooperation, but is a "must" campaign in which Uncle Sam says "Get out the scrap, and now." Newspapers of the nation are leading now in the intensive campaign.

Donald M. Nelson, chief of the War Production Board, in a telegram Wednesday to T. E. Wilson, publisher of The Daily Herald, said:

"The prompt and enthusiastic action of your newspaper in accepting leadership in the vital national salvage program is the kind of answer I expected in my challenge to the American press. If we are to maintain and increase production of the planes, tanks and ships needed by our fighting men and fighting allies we must get in every pound of scrap in this country—from the homes, from the farms, and from industry.

"A successful Fall campaign conducted by the American newspapers, in cooperation with state and local salvage committees, will avert a serious decline in steel production and add to our stores of other scarce materials.

Appeals To Public

"As chairman of the War Production Board, I call on every citizen of the United States to make this campaign a success, by gathering and turning in all the scrap metals, rubber and rags that can possibly be spared.

"Let towering victory stockpiles in every community in the nation stand as symbols of America's defiance of the axis."

The local drive will be launched next Wednesday when Mayor Ben H. Gordon is proclaiming a "Scrap Holiday." All schools of the city will dismiss classes at noon, all retail business houses will be closed during the afternoon, and every one will be asked to do his part in the campaign.

County Quota Set

Pickaway county has been assigned a quota of 2,100 tons of scrap for the balance of 1942, and government salvagers are urging that this quota be reached by November 1. So far in all phases of salvage collection about

U. S. DRIVE IN SECOND PHASE

Aerial Onslaught Against Japanese Installations Showing Results

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23—The second phase of America's offensive in the Solomons appears to be shaping up today in the air, with dive bombers and flying fortresses shuttling between U. S. airfields and enemy-held islands northwest of Guadalcanal to blast Japanese bases and installations.

According to Navy communications, the current aerial onslaught against the Nipponese began September 9 with a bombing attack on Gizo island, in the New Georgia group, 215 miles northwest of Guadalcanal, and since then has increased in intensity and scope.

Gizo and Rekata bay, the latter on Santa Isabel island, have been the principal targets of bombing and strafing attacks by long-range Army flying fortresses as well as by Marine and Navy dive bombers.

In its latest communique the Navy reported that flying fortresses on September 19 bombed Gizo island, and presumably on their way home bombed and strafed shore installations at Rekata.

WOMEN WORKERS IN WAR PLANTS CLING TO BEAUTY

CHICAGO, Sept. 23—The nation's industries today were urged to provide facilities for feminine primping and, in some cases, to see to it that beauty parlors are established near their plants to cut down the number of lost hours by their women war workers.

Women's absences from jobs in war work are closely allied to their eternal problem of remaining attractive, Ernest J. Downing, industrial hygienist of the National Safety Council told the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists association convention.

INDIANS HUNT 22 VICTIMS OF LAKE TRAGEDY

MIDLAND, Ont., Sept. 23 — Ojibway Indians searched the weeds bounding Georgian bay today for the bodies of 22 of 25 men drowned Monday.

Rough waters kept authorities from dragging the bay near the Isle de Beausoleil where a 72-foot Diesel-powered launch carrying 42 foundry workers employed by Bert Corbeau, one-time National Hockey league figure, went down. The body of Corbeau and two companions were found in a weed bed of the Isle de Beausoleil yesterday. Today, Chief Coroner Dr. Smirle Lawson directed the search not only for the remaining bodies but for the launch itself.

Survivors said the launch had been brought from side to side when brought about suddenly, but added that she had not turned over. They credited the sinking to open porpoises which filled with water.

DRAIN ON FARM LABOR WEIGHED

Senator Demands Complete New Manpower System For Nation

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23 — As Secretary of Agriculture Wickard and Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, draft director, were summoned before Congress for testimony on the serious drain of farm labor, Sen. Ellison D. Smith (D) N. C. today demanded a complete new national manpower system to assure the nation enough men for military, industrial and farm armies.

At the same time, Sen. Claude Pepper (D) Fla., asked appointment of a committee of five senators to make an investigation of the manpower commission.

Wickard and Gen. Hershey were called before the House Agriculture Committee to answer questions on how the draft and the lure of high industrial wages are causing a shortage of farm help.

Possible Decisive Victory For President Causes Jitters In Ag Circles

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23 — The House today in its first vote on the Steagall anti-inflation bill adopted an amendment designed to prevent President Roosevelt from exercising "blank-check" powers in stabilizing prices, wages and salaries. The vote was 64 to 16.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23—A poll made by administration leaders today indicated that the Senate will adopt a "farm bloc" wage-cost amendment to the anti-inflation bill which spokesmen said will wreck the price-wage stabilization program of President Roosevelt.

While Senate leaders declined to officially concede defeat, they abandoned their previous claims of victory in the fight and instead, warned senators that the bill will be vetoed if it contains the "farm bloc" amendment.

By William S. Neal

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23—Both the Senate and House today moved toward crucial votes on the anti-inflation bill with President Roosevelt's price-wage stabilization program threatened by "farm bloc" amendments.

House leaders planned to drive the Steagall bill to final passage tonight, while Senate leaders were fearful that the battle over the "farm bloc" proposal for higher ceilings will delay final action.

"Farm bloc" leaders in both branches demanded that all farm labor be included in arriving at parity prices—a formula which admittedly would carry parity to about 112 percent—while Republicans chided Mr. Roosevelt for failure to use all his present power to put ceilings on food prices.

Taft Backs FDR

The battle split party lines. Sen. Taft (R) Ohio came to the defense of the President's anti-inflation proposals in the Senate and declared that if the "farm bloc" amendment is adopted the entire bill designed to meet the President's October 1 deadline should be killed.

The vote appeared so close in the Senate that Democratic leaders ordered a poll taken. "Farm bloc" leaders were confident that they would win and administration leaders, abandoning their previous claims, appeared jittery over the

LOUIE SCHNEIDER, FAMED RACER OF AUTOS, DIES

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 23 — Louis (Louie) F. Schneider, 40, widely-known automobile race driver and winner of the Indianapolis 500-mile classic in 1931, was dead today as the result of an injury suffered in a crash four years ago on a California track.

Schneider died from complications which followed the crushing of his left arm in the California crash.

He began his racing career in 1920 on dirt tracks of the East and middle West. He entered his first 500-mile race here in 1928 and qualified his car at 114.036 miles per hour. In 1930, he placed third in the Memorial day race, then in 1931, took first place in the classic and also captured the driving championship of the A.A.A. His last race here was in 1933.

Survivors include a daughter, and a son. Funeral services will be held Thursday afternoon.

Brass Hats To Have No Part In U. S. Bomb Force

HEADQUARTERS OF THE U. S. BOMBER COMMAND, SOMEWHERE IN BRITAIN, Sept. 23 — "There are to be no swivel-chair brass hats in the U. S. bomber command," Major Gen. Ira C. Eaker, just promoted from brigadier general, declared today.

This applies to every member of the staff from himself down, Eaker emphasized.

No American bomber crew will be sent on unwise missions over Germany through the ignorance of staff officers as to the exact hazards bomber squadrons face, he continued.

Eaker believes that the lessons of war are learnable only under fire and that high staff officers must take the same risks as the members of crews now carrying out precision daylight bombing raids. He said:

Out For Results

"We are going to get maximum results in destruction of enemy installations with a minimum expenditure of men and planes."

In substance, Eaker's mandate, which calls on staff officers to undergo refresher training as gunners of flying fortresses and take part in raids over the continent, is designed to let them know "just what the boys are up against."

Eaker already has set the example for his staff officers by going on one of the heaviest of the cross-channel raids to date, it was revealed.

REPUBLICANS IN HOUSE PLEDGE SUPPORT TO WAR

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23—Republican members of the house of representatives today stood on a new war platform which pledges wholehearted support to the war effort, but demands that President Roosevelt immediately utilize "the most capable and efficient military and civilian leadership."

The declaration of policies and principles, adopted at an unusual Republican conference, was prepared by a committee consisting of Reps. Hope, Kans.; Wigglesworth, Mass.; Robinson, Ky.; Dirksen, Ill., and Carter, Calif.

Republican leader Joseph W. Martin, Jr., Mass., said that the platform had been adopted "almost unanimously." He added that one or two members had voted "no," but that the principles had been overwhelmingly agreed upon.

With political circles predicting that it will play an important part in the November elections, the platform declares that the Republicans are opposed to any attempt for a negotiated peace or even consideration of peace until "decisive victory" has been achieved and the United States, with its allies, is able to dictate the peace terms without compromise or appeasement.

Correspondent Lost

Jack Singer, above, 27-year-old International News Service war correspondent on duty with the Navy in the Pacific, has been reported "missing in action" by the Navy department. Singer recently wrote an eyewitness story of an attack on a Japanese aircraft carrier by American naval torpedo planes, in one of which he rode.

COUNTY YOUTH MISSING, NAVY TELLS MOTHER

Fear that another Pickaway county youth has been added to the nation's casualty list was expressed Wednesday when it was learned that Albert Stires, 19, of the U. S. Navy, is "missing in action."

Young Stires, son of Mrs. Maude Stires of Harrisburg, graduated from Darby township high school, Derby. He attended Harrisburg grade schools and was active in 4-H club work. He was employed in Columbus by a realty company prior to his enlistment in the Navy in June, 1941, just before he reached 18.

Information that he is missing was sent to his mother by the Navy department.

The youth's last letter to his mother was written July 31 at which time he said that he had taken an electrician's examination for advancement. The Navy, in informing his mother that he was missing, quoted his rating as petty officer, third class. He was stationed in the Pacific area.

BEWARE WORLD WAR SHELLS, IS STATE WARNING

COLUMBUS, Sept. 23 — Col. Roland L. Gaugler, chief of the ordnance branch of the fifth service command, today warned scrap collectors not to promiscuously handle shells of World War vintage which appear to "live."

The warning followed the discovery of two 37 millimeter shells, mementos of World War I, which were donated to the Columbus scrap metal drive. Both were fully loaded and had fuse and detonating caps.

Col. Gaugler, who is holding the two "live" shells, said that persons finding ammunition which appears to be loaded should contact the fifth service command and an ordnance expert will examine it.

CAIRO, Sept. 23—Wild-riding British Commandos in 60-mile an hour jeeps have carried out land raids on Benghazi, Barce, Tobruk and the Gialo oasis deep in the Libyan desert, it was disclosed today.

British motorized forces occupied Gialo for several days, an official communique said, while heavy casualties were inflicted on Italian and German troops at the nearby garrison.

Few details of the Gialo raid were announced, but official British circles characterized it as part of a "planned thrust" against Benghazi. More than 30 planes were destroyed or damaged on the ground and several others shot down in the latest air attack against the port.

The Russians threw heavy tanks into the battle for Stalingrad today to engage Nazi Panzer units attempting to smash through the stubborn defenses of the Volga river city while Soviet artillery raked the roads leading toward the beleaguered metropolis with a deadly fire.

For the first time since the relentless battle for Stalingrad got underway a month ago, front line dispatches mentioned action by the Soviet tank divisions. The Germans, by their own admissions, were surprised by the strength of the city's fortifications and heavy guns and the entry of Russian land battleships gave the invaders another jolt.

Red Guns Effective

Soviet artillery, standing wheel to wheel, unloosed endless salvos in a determined effort to cut off Nazi reinforcements while infantry forces engage the Germans in furious street fighting. The Nazis and Russians were fighting for every house, for every street corner, for every pile of rubble in order to convert these positions into strong points.

From the usual conservative Red Star, official army newspaper which is not given to flashy statements, came word that the grim defenders of Stalingrad were

U. S. AVIATORS FIND THEIR FUN BLASTING JAPS

SOMEWHERE IN NEW GUINEA, Sept. 23—American flyers, carrying out repeated attacks on the long Japanese supply lines stretching from Buna to the Owen Stanley mountain range, jubilantly told today how much fun they are getting out of their job.

They fly around and wait until the Japanese have rebuilt a bridge and then they dive on the structure and smash it while the enemy construction crew races to cover.

The Japanese are fully aware of the danger to their supply lines and resultant danger to their ground forces which have been held in check in their drive towards the important allied base at Port Moresby. The enemy is attempting to widen the narrow overland paths into roads and are building bridges in an effort to facilitate transportation of food and ammunition.

And that's where Captain Bill Hennon, of Mound, Minn., and his flying pals come into the picture. These birdmen are busting Japanese bridges faster than the enemy can build them. They're burning and sinking small ships trying to reinforce the enemy base at Buna. The Japanese airdrome at Buna has been repeatedly strafed as have the roads everywhere between Kokoda and Buna.

CAIRO, Sept. 23—Wild-riding British Commandos in 60-mile an hour jeeps have carried out land raids on Benghazi, Barce, Tobruk and the Gialo oasis deep in the Libyan desert, it was disclosed today.

British motorized forces occupied Gialo for several days, an official communiqué said, while heavy casualties were inflicted on Italian and German troops at the nearby garrison.

Few details of the Gialo raid were announced, but official British circles characterized it as part of a "planned thrust" against Benghazi. More than 30 planes were destroyed or damaged on the ground and several others shot down in the latest air attack against the port.

The Russians threw heavy tanks into the battle for Stalingrad today to engage Nazi Panzer units attempting to smash through the stubborn defenses of the Volga river city while Soviet artillery raked the roads leading toward the beleaguered metropolis with a deadly fire.

For the first time since the relentless battle for Stalingrad got underway a month ago, front line dispatches mentioned action by the Soviet tank divisions. The Germans, by their own admissions, were surprised by the strength of the city's fortifications and heavy guns and the entry of Russian land battalions gave the invaders another jolt.

Red Guns Effective

Soviet artillery, standing wheel to wheel, unloosed endless salvos in a determined effort to cut off Nazi reinforcements while infantry forces engage the Germans in furious street fighting. The Nazis and Russians were fighting for every house, for every street corner, for every pile of rubble in order to convert these positions into strong points.

From the usual conservative Red Star, official army newspaper which is not given to flashy statements, came word that the grim defenders of Stalingrad were

U. S. AVIATORS FIND THEIR FUN BLASTING JAPS

SOMEWHERE IN NEW GUINEA, Sept. 23—American flyers, carrying out repeated attacks on the long Japanese supply lines stretching from Buna to the Owen Stanley mountain range, jubilantly told today how much fun they are getting out of their job.

They fly around and wait until the Japanese have rebuilt a bridge and then they dive on the structure and smash it while the enemy construction crew races to cover.

The Japanese are fully aware of the danger to their supply lines and resultant danger to their ground forces which have been held in check in their drive towards the important allied base at Port Moresby. The enemy is attempting to widen the narrow overland paths into roads and are building bridges in an effort to facilitate transportation of food and ammunition.

And that's where Captain Bill Heannon, of Mound, Minn., and his flying pals come into the picture. These birdmen are busting Japanese bridges faster than the enemy can build them. They're burning and sinking small ships trying to reinforce the enemy base at Buna. The Japanese airdrome at Buna has been repeatedly strafed as have the roads everywhere between Kokoda and Buna.

HENRY MILLER SEEKS TO HOLD AMNESIA WIFE

Marriage To Hollywood Man Not Even A Memory To 25-Year-Old Bride

EVEN UNAWARE OF WAR

Woman Remembers Nothing From Time First Husband Was Found Dead

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 23—Henry Miller, Hollywood commercial photographer, declared today that although his 25-year-old bride of five months can't remember her marriage to him or anything that has happened since November, 1941, he will make every effort to keep her as his wife.

"If my wife tries to divorce me because she claims lack of memory of marrying me, there'll be a lot of people doing that," Miller said after the woman, Mrs. Gloria Caroline Weller Miller, was found by police Sunday. She had been missing since Friday night.

Mrs. Miller told police that although she didn't remember the Las Vegas marriage ceremony last May 1 in which she became the bride of the photographer, "Miller must be my husband."

"I think, though, that I'll stay with Henry," she told police psychiatrists. "It may be that I can learn to love him again."

Lapse of Memory
Psychiatrists reported that the woman remembers nothing of her personal life or world events from November, 1941, to last Friday night when she found herself driving a strange car.

It was on the night of November 4, 1941, that the woman found the body of her first husband, H. Pierce Weller, retired Birmingham, N. Y., newspaper editor, in her Alascador home. The shock resulted in a lapse of memory.

Psychiatrists said that Mrs. Weller did not know that the United States was at war.

Dr. Paul de River, police psychiatrist, released notes that the woman had written while she stayed in a Ventura auto court during her three-day disappearance. They read in part:

"Scared To Death"
"Friday night. Scared to death. Found myself driving alone. Didn't know where I was! Kept driving for quite a while trying to think. Getting sort of dizzy and a headache. Saw bar in hotel, stopped and had a highball so could look through purse. . . .

"Felt very tired and had terrible headaches. Poor old Pierce! My baby died and here I find myself in Los Angeles. How did I get here so fast and what am I doing here and where is Pierce? Turned radio on and discovered it is September 1942! . . . Where have I been all this time?"

Dr. de River reported that Mrs. Miller was suffering from mild hysterical amnesia. He said that she will gradually regain her full state of consciousness.

"From time to time," he said, "it is not uncommon to find someone with a sensitive nervous system who will show this form of reaction, so prevalent in veterans of the last war."

"Unquestionably the patient is suffering from a complex formation, which has entered the stream of consciousness from the unconscious realms of her mind. This has resulted in the awareness of her first husband's death and as a result has contributed to her present state."

MRS. CATHERINE M. GRUBB DIES IN ROSS COUNTY

Mrs. Catherine M. Grubb, 84, mother of James Grubb, 421 South Washington street, died Tuesday at her home in Huntington township, Ross county. She was the wife of George Grubb.

Other survivors are two other sons, Frank and Elza of Chillicothe; two daughters, Iona and Mary of Chillicothe; three brothers, William Conrod, Ashland, Ky.; Frank, Bloomingsburg, and James of Chillicothe Route 3.

Funeral will be Tuesday at 2 p. m. in the Bishop Hill church with burial in the adjoining cemetery.

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK OBSERVATION IS URGED

Circleville Civilian Defense Council has been urged by the state OCD to participate in a statewide Fire Prevention Week to be observed October 4 to 10.

Ohio State Council of Defense asks that steps be taken to conserve human and material resources from the destructive force of fire.

Asserting that accidental fires "are as much help to Hitler and Hirohito as though they had set them off with their own incendiary bombs," Defense Council Director Ralph H. Stone asked all local councils to stress the importance of keeping homes and places of employment safe from fire.

SOLDIER PHOTOS ON DISPLAY AT CRIST'S STORE

Junior Chamber of Commerce has removed photos of Circleville and Pickaway county men in Uncle Sam's service from the show window of the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric company, East Main street, to the Crist department store at Court and Main.

Transfer of the photos, which have been attracting great attention from townfolk and from persons traveling through the city, was made Tuesday afternoon.

Jaycees ask that anyone who has a photo of a boy in service which does not appear in the window take it to the Crist store or to the Harpster and Yost hardware store, East Main street, where James Yost, president of the Jaycees, will take charge of it.

The organization plans to change rank markings on the photos once each month if requested. If a youth is a private and becomes a corporal, his next of kin is asked to notify the organization and the change will be made on the photo.

Jaycees conducted a business meeting Tuesday evening during which plans for a benefit dance to be held in Memorial Hall in October were discussed. A card party will also be held. Proceeds of the dance and card party will be used to help finance the organization's various projects, including cigarettes for soldiers, the photograph board and the name board which is almost completed at the Grand theatre.

Frank Susa, Roger Vega and Dr. Robert Hedges are in charge of arrangements for the dance and card party.

Mr. Yost, Judson Lanman and Glenn Skinner will attend a statewide Jaycee board meeting next Sunday in the Deshler-Wallick hotel, Columbus.

The local organization, which has been quite active since it was formed, received an excellent notice in this month's edition of "Future," national Jaycee magazine, for its program.

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

(Perhaps with his boss ordering him to Washington, he had to.)

Cabinet members are chalking up the Jeffers appointment as one more score for Harry Hopkins, and point out that the old friendship between Harry and Averell Harriman is certainly bearing fruit. The play on Jeffers was Harriman to Hopkins to Roosevelt.

Behind both the Chester Davis choice and Jeffers' final selection was the desire to appease the farm belt, still smarting over the veto of rubber from grain alcohol. But it so happens that Jeffers, though living in Nebraska, has oil in his background. The Union Pacific has its own oil fields.

The controversy of making rubber out of oil or grain alcohol will continue.

SHOOTING IN ALASKA

Major General Simon Bolivar Buckner, Jr., son of the famous Civil War commander, is having a private battle of his own in Alaska, where he is commander of U. S. Army forces. The battle doesn't involve the Japs. It involves Alaskan moose, kodak bears and, more than anything else, it involves Ira. N. Gabrielson, chief of the Fish and Wildlife Service.

Mr. Gabrielson is very irate at General Simon Bolivar Buckner because of the General's custom of taking a small amphibian plane, landing on one of Alaska's inland lakes and shooting moose and bear. In a few hours, the General is able to fly to the heart of wildest Alaska, where man is seldom seen and where the hunting is excellent.

Gabrielson claims, however, that the General is overdoing it and also that other officers have been doing too much airplane hunting.

All of this has helped bring to a head the question of hunting by the armed forces in Alaska. There is not much to do in Alaska, and all the boys, being armed with rifles, would like to hunt. But if they did, there are enough troops in Alaska to kill all the game in the immediate vicinity of the camps in a short time. And the troops don't have the airplane transportation to get far away from camp.

So the people of Alaska have been dead against hunting by the troops. Finally the matter has been compromised, however, by giving the troops the right to hunt after they have been residents for one year—which is the rule which governs all citizens of Alaska.

Henderson has received reports of widespread evasions of rent-freezing regulations from OPA field officers, chiefly in crowded industrial centers.

In addition to evicting tenants unlawfully, there have been many cases of false sales of houses—a paper transaction whereby homes are "sold" without a down payment, and the new occupants make monthly payments far in excess of maximum rentals.

To cope with this trick, Henderson is planning to issue an order providing that there be mandatory cash down payments of at least $500 on all homes sold on the installment plan, and that monthly payments be lower than the frozen rent scales on the homes.

Henderson also is planning to do some swift cracking down on apartment house owners who evict tenants on trumped-up charges of lease-breaking and then rent to others at higher rental charges. Though an outright violation of the law, this practice is prevalent in a number of industrial centers.

400 tons have been found in this county.

The program outlined at a meeting of salvage leaders Wednesday includes house-to-house canvassing by pupils of the city schools next Wednesday starting at noon. Volunteer trucks are being needed to collect all kinds of salvage materials, and Mayor Gordon asks that any persons who have heavy materials which will help in loading on trucks may call City Hall, Phone No. 53, to leave names and addresses.

Tom Armstrong, assistant athletic coach, has been designated as director of the schools' participation, being assigned the task of getting pupils and teachers lined up to make the important house-to-house visit.

Search For Scrap

All residents of the city are asked to go through their homes, their yards and outbuildings to hunt, scrap iron, copper, aluminum, rags, tin cans which will be taken if the ends are broken out and they are crushed. Magazines will be accepted, but no newspapers. Corrugated boxes will be taken, and almost any other kind of scrap that can be found.

Salvagers said that all scrap should be donated to the collectors who will receive no money for their part in the program. All salvage will be taken to junk dealers who will pay the usual price for all materials, and all money collected will be turned over to the Pickaway County Community Chest.

After the drive has been carried out in Circleville, attention of salvagers will be turned to the rural area with similar campaigns to be organized in each village and each township. Assistance of village officials and of township trustees is promised, and AAA officials have pledged their assistance in the important campaign.

OLD BUILDINGS MAY CONTRIBUTE TO SCRAP DRIVE

NEW YORK, Sept. 23—Large-scale demolition of outmoded vacant buildings to provide a vast supply of scrap metal for war use was proposed today by Robert Moses, coordinator of the intensified salvage drive in New York City.

A city wide survey of the vacant buildings already is underway by municipal officials.

Moses said the survey would pay particular attention to 9,000 old law tenement buildings in the city and struck out at "legalisms" and "quibbling" that would block the flow of scrap by dismantling the structures. He warned that unless municipal and federal authorities agreed on a plan to obtain the scrap from the buildings. The only alternative would be "direct requisitioning by Washington or letting the rest of the country make up New York's deficiency."

PARKING LOT COWBOYS MUST CUT DOWN SPEED

CHICAGO, Sept. 23—The "cowboy" parking lot attendant who madly races your car into position and grinds to a sudden stop today was warned that this practice is out for the duration of the war.

Michael F. Mulcahy, Chicago tire rationing director, asserted the nation's need for rubber is so great that rapid jockeying of automobiles will not be tolerated.

"The man who drives slowly to work to save rubber," he said, "often loses more rubber than he has saved by the careless handling of a car by a parking lot employee."

Lenico has a stack of 224 learner's permits and he hopes to pass his driving test this time. If he doesn't, he'll apply for permit No. 225.

Going on bombing forays in flying fortresses, they said, was "just like taking a cross-country flight."

Lieut. Col. Cecil (Brick) Leasing, a redhead from Ellsworth, Kan., who helped bomb Amiens in a diversionary raid the same day the Commandos struck at Dieppe, remarked:

"It really wasn't very exciting. I was too busy to think much about it. The Focke-Wulf 190's were no match for our fortresses. We just went over in close formation with Spitfires forming an umbrella and hit the target right on the nose."

No U. S. Casualties

"It was pretty cold—42 degrees below zero. We were up nearly 30,000 feet and there was plenty of flak bursting all around us, but we evaded it without casualties."

"Most of the excitement came on the way back, when the turret gunner broke his oxygen mask. I gave him mine and nearly suffocated before we started to land."

"I watched all our bombs fall right into the railroad shop yards. High plumes of smoke billowed upward."

Before embarking on actual raids over the continent, the staff officers study movies of air fighting during the battle of France two years ago.

SIGNS SEEN OF NAVY VICTORY OVER HUN SUBS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23—Signs that the Navy is whipping the Atlantic submarine menace were seen today in a war shipping insurance report made by Rear Admiral Emory S. Land to the Senate Commerce committee.

The report covers the months of June and July, but carries the latest figures available. It shows that policies issued on ships in July ran more than $5,000,000 less than in June.

There were 88 policies issued in June for total face value of $10,880,115. Land told Sen. Josiah Bailey (D) S. C., Commerce Committee chairman.

In July, however, only 36 policies were issued. These were written for a total coverage of only $4,815,541. Premiums for July were only $13,737 against $38,799 in the previous months.

The policies are issued by the War Shipping Administration of which Admiral Land is administrator.

LIGHT FROST REPORTED IN EXPOSED PLACES

Light frost was reported Wednesday in high, exposed locations throughout Pickaway county, but County Extension Agent F. K. Blair said that only minor damage had been caused. He said that frost had been noticed in scattered areas the last three mornings on beans, sweet potato vines and some flowers.

Circleville's low temperature Wednesday was 41 degrees in keeping with the trend of the last few days. Tuesday's high mark was 68 degrees.

The staff officers were placed at gun stations, and fired camera guns at fighter planes in all sorts of positions.

Other staff officers, operating with crews, carried out practice flights in the manner of a regular bombing raid. This they called a "dry swim."

The commander of the training program said:

"We duplicate the operations in precise detail to make the crews letter perfect, so that when they get in actual combat they act automatically instead of becoming nervous and excited."

sweeping the invaders back in the northwestern outskirts of the city. However, the enemy succeeded in capturing several streets in an unidentified sector.

Star New Drive

A new offensive was launched by the Germans in the Mzodok sector of the central Caucasus where they are in position to threaten the Grozny oil fields 60 miles away. The Nazi troops pushed along the southern bank of the Terek river with strong infantry and tank forces.

On another sector of the Soviet Russian battlefield, heavy Soviet artillery gave new support to the drive apparently aimed at lifting the year-old siege of Leningrad by smashing many enemy batteries in the last few days.

Meantime, reports in London said that Nazi Field Marshal Fedor Von Bock, commander of the German forces in southeastern Russia, and Hitler have come to a parting of the ways. These reports said Von Bock was dismissed when he and Hitler no longer saw eye-to-eye on how Germany's military campaign should be run.

Air War In East

While aerial activity continued to dominate the military picture in the southwest Pacific, Washington observers saw the second phase of America's offensive in the Solomon Island shaping up in the air. A Japanese counter-attack in strength has been looked for but United States planes have not been content to sit about waiting for it to come. Japanese bases and installations have been raided by dive-bombers and flying fortresses shuttling between United States airfields and enemy-held islands northwest of Guadalcanal.

Other American planes have kept up their attacks against Japanese bases and shipping in New Guinea and neighboring areas to impede the enemy's efforts to bring supplies to ground troops attempting to drive on Port Moresby.

Germany was given a respite in night attacks by the RAF which have dealt blows to the Wehrmacht by smashing raids against key factories.

U. S. DRIVE IN SECOND PHASE

Marine corps Douglas dive-bombers attacked and damaged a Japanese cruiser northwest of Guadalcanal and bombed shore installations at Rekata bay, the communiqué added.

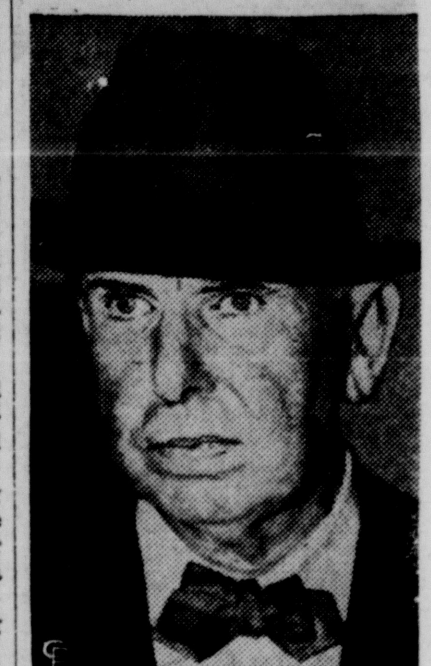

At the same time the Navy reported that land fighting between U. S. Marines and Japanese patrols increased on September 20 but that "our positions remain intact."

While a Nipponese counter-attack in strength has been anticipated for more than a week, the belief prevailed in official circles that the apparent Nipponese delay has given the Americans valuable time to prepare for such a fresh thrust.

Thus the American aerial onslaught which has been gaining momentum recently obviously is defensive as well as offensive. By blasting enemy bases and shore installations northwest of the Tulagi area, the U. S. planes undoubtedly are hampering possible Nipponese counterattack preparations.

From the offensive standpoint, these aerial attacks are paving the way for the eventual extension of the Pacific "second front" to other islands in the Solomons still in Nipponese hands.

DRAIN ON FARM LABOR WEIGHED

that "Selective Service is not doing the job," adding that it is not the fault of the men in charge, "but the fault of a system that is inadequate to our national needs."

"I have no hesitancy in predicting that we will lose one-third of our 1942 farm crop for lack of farm labor," Smith said. "That is a loss that will run into billions—not mere millions. It is almost criminal that in times when food is so sorely needed everywhere in the world that such a condition should exist."

Smith said he believed that high wages being paid in industry were more responsible by far than the draft for the shortage of farm labor.

"There is nothing left for us to do," Smith said, "but to revise the whole manpower set-up to get us out of the muddle."

"There should be a national manpower council established at once with power to create pools of men available for duty in three distinctly different types of armies—the field of combat army, the industrial army and the farm army."

Smith said he was hesitant about Congress voting a draft of labor but asserted that it might become necessary soon, in order to avoid registration of women who, he held, should be "kept at home."

The best way of handling the farm labor problem, the veteran Southerner said, is to call men up for induction, but allow them to remain on farms if that is where they belong. If they leave the farms to take high paying industrial jobs, he would immediately put them into the Army.

SOLONS MOVING TOWARD VOTE ON INFLATION BILL

Farm Bloc Leaders Stand Firm In Demands For Higher Price Ceilings

prospect of a decisive victory for the President.

Compromise Possible

A compromise may be sought by administration leaders in the Senate, under which price ceilings would be fixed at about 105 percent of parity. The major purpose of Mr. Roosevelt's message asking legislation was to obtain removal of the 10 percent restriction in present law.

Sens. Thomas (D) Okla. and Hatch (D) N. M. led the Senate fight for the "farm bloc" amendment in the face of administration claims that their proposal would force up the cost of living and thus defeat the White House program.

"I think we have the votes to win, although I have not made a check," said Thomas. "We only ask what is fair."

Sen. Norris (I) Neb., who has supported Mr. Roosevelt in many previous fights, broke with the administration on the issue.

"It seems to be fundamental that the farmer's labor costs must be included," he said. "I am afraid of inflation, but if I thought this would lead to some inflation I would vote for it anyway, because it is right."

Farm Bloc Accused

Democratic Senate leader Barkley charged that the "farm bloc" plan would prohibit the President from holding down farm prices until they reached 120 percent of parity. The general average of farm prices now is said by experts to be about 107 percent of parity.

Senate issues still to be decided included the Ball amendment prohibiting wage increases above the "little steel" formula and the Norris amendment permitting the President to ban utility rate increases.

Chairman Steagall (D) Ala. of the House Banking Committee was to lead the fight for the House bill, which differs sharply from the Senate measure.

The Steagall version simply puts floors under both agricultural prices and industrial wages and salaries. In addition to the battle over farm labor costs expected to be waged, another major issue also confronted the House over a provision making the so-called "little steel" formula the minimum ceiling under which the President could set on wages.

The "little steel" formula handed down by the War Board in a recent wage case, allowed a 15 percent increase in wages above the January, 1941, level and the House bill would place congressional stamp of approval on this formula and forbid the President to fix a ceiling on anyone's wages who had not had the benefit of as much as a 15 percent raise before that date.

FINLAND MAY SEEK PEACE IS RUSSIANS HOLD

LONDON, Sept. 23—The London Daily Express said today in a dispatch from Stockholm that despite heavy German pressure against Helsinki, it was "believed" Finland may try to reach some kind of an "arrangement" if the Nazis are unable to take Stalingrad.

The dispatch said that the German minister at Helsinki has persuaded the Finnish government to disavow a statement made in Washington by Hjalmar J. Procope, the Finnish minister, regarding his country's plans to continue in the war.

It was said that the Finnish government refused German demands to dismiss Procope from his post.

These reports said Von Bock was dismissed when he and Hitler no longer saw eye-to-eye on how Germany's military campaign should be run.

Air War In East

While aerial activity continued to dominate the military picture in the southwest Pacific, Washington observers saw the second phase of America's offensive in the Solomon Island shaping up in the air. A Japanese counter-attack in strength has been looked for but United States planes have not been content to sit at waiting for it to come. Japanese bases and installations have been raided by dive-bombers and flying fortresses shuttling between United States airfields and enemy-held islands northwest of Guadalcanal. Other American planes have kept up their attacks against Japanese bases and shipping in New Guinea and neighboring areas to impede the enemy's efforts to bring supplies to ground troops attempting to drive on Port Moresby.

Germany was given a respite in night attacks by the RAF which have dealt blows to the Wehrmacht by smashing raids against key factories.

U. S. DRIVE IN SECOND PHASE

Marine corps Douglas dive-bombers attacked and damaged a Japanese cruiser northwest of Guadalcanal and bombed shore installations at Rekata bay, the communiqué added.

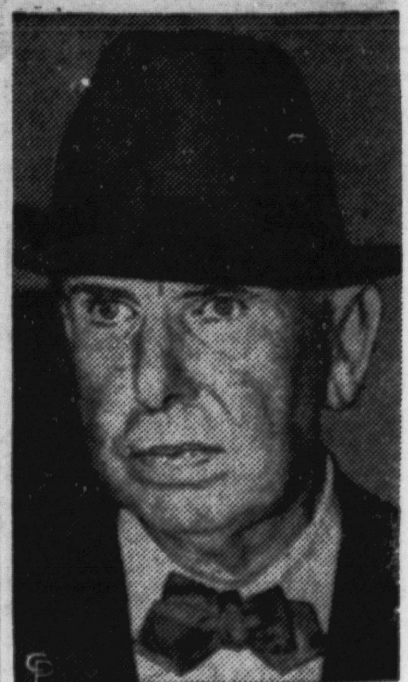

At the same time the Navy reported that land fighting between U. S. Marines and Japanese patrols increased on September 20 but that "our positions remain intact."

While a Nipponese counter-attack in strength has been anticipated for more than a week, the belief prevailed in official circles that the apparent Nipponese delay has given the Americans valuable time to prepare for such a fresh thrust.

Thus the American aerial onslaught which has been gaining momentum recently obviously is defensive as well as offensive. By blasting enemy bases and shore installations northwest of the Tulagi area, the U. S. planes undoubtedly are hampering possible Nipponese counterattack preparations.

From the offensive standpoint, these aerial attacks are paving the way for the eventual extension of the Pacific "second front" to other islands in the Solomons still in Nipponese hands.

DRAIN ON FARM LABOR WEIGHED

that "Selective Service is not doing the job," adding that it is not the fault of the men in charge. "but the fault of a system that is inadequate to our national needs."
"I have no hesitancy in predicting that we will lose one-third of our 1942 farm crop for lack of farm labor," Smith said. "That is a loss that will run into billions—not mere millions. It is almost criminal that in times when food is so sorely needed everywhere in the world that such a condition should exist."

Smith said he believed that high wages being paid in industry were more responsible by far than the draft for the shortage of farm labor.

"There is nothing left for us to do," Smith said, "but to revise the whole manpower set-up to get us out of the muddle."

"There should be a national manpower council established at once with power to create pools of men available for duty in three distinctly different types of armies—the field of combat army, the industrial army and the farm army."

Smith said he was hesitant about Congress voting a draft of labor but asserted that it might become necessary soon, in order to avoid registration of women who, he held, should be "kept at home."

The best way of handling the farm labor problem, the veteran Southerner said, is to call men up for induction, but allow them to remain on farms if that is where they belong. If they leave the farms to take high paying industrial jobs, he would immediately put them into the Army.

SOLONS MOVING TOWARD VOTE ON INFLATION BILL

prospect of a decisive victory for the President.

Compromise Possible
A compromise may be sought by administration leaders in the Senate, under which price ceilings would be fixed at about 105 percent of parity. The major purpose of Mr. Roosevelt's message asking legislation was to obtain removal of the 10 percent restriction in present law.

Sens. Thomas (D) Okla. and Hatch (D) N. M. led the Senate fight for the "farm bloc" amendment in the face of administration claims that their proposal would force up the cost of living and thus defeat the White House program.

"I think we have the votes to win, although I have not made a check," said Thomas. "We only ask what is fair."

Sen. Norris (I) Neb., who has supported Mr. Roosevelt in many previous fights, broke with the administration on the issue.

"It seems to be fundamental that the farmer's labor costs must be included," he said. "I am afraid of inflation, but if I thought this would lead to some inflation I would vote for it anyway, because it is right."

Farm Bloc Accused
Democratic Senate leader Barkley charged that the "farm bloc" plan would prohibit the President from holding down farm prices until they reached 120 percent of parity. The general average of farm prices now is said by experts to be about 107 percent of parity.

Senate issues still to be decided included the Ball amendment prohibiting wage increases above the "little steel" formula and the Norris amendment permitting the President to ban utility rate increases.

Chairman Steagall (D) Ala. of the House Banking Committee was to lead the fight for the House bill, which differs sharply from the Senate measure.

The Steagall version simply puts floors under both agricultural prices and industrial wages and salaries. In addition to the battle over farm labor costs expected to be waged, another major issue also confronted the House over a provision making the so-called "little steel" formula the minimum ceiling under which the President could set on wages.

The "little steel" formula handed down by the War Board in a recent wage case, allowed a 15 percent increase in wages above the January, 1941, level and the House bill would place congressional stamp of approval on this formula and forbid the President to fix a ceiling on anyone's wages who had not had the benefit of as much as a 15 percent raise before that date.

FINLAND MAY SEEK PEACE IS RUSSIANS HOLD

LONDON, Sept. 23—The London Daily Express said today in a dispatch from Stockholm that despite heavy German pressure against Helsinki, it was "believed" Finland may try to reach some kind of an "arrangement" if the Nazis are unable to take Stalingrad.

The dispatch said that the German minister at Helsinki has persuaded the Finnish government to disavow a statement made in Washington by Hjalmar J. Procope, the Finnish minister, regarding his country's plans to continue in the war.

It was said that the Finnish government refused German demands to dismiss Procope from his post.

BUMS MAY LOSE PENNANT, BUT THEY GET SCRAP

The Brooklyn Dodgers apparently will not get the National League pennant, but they certainly are getting scrap, and not the flint variety, either. "Dem Bums" followers are shown lined up outside Ebbets field, each of them carrying 10 pounds or more of scrap metal which admitted them to the field to see their favorites in action. The scrap was turned in to the nation-wide drive.

GIVE A CAR

PEOPLE may know, but are curiously slow to admit, that the most obvious source of scrap steel in this country is old autos. There is probably a ton of steel in each of them, and there must be at least 10,000,000 cars out of commission or ready for wrecking.

Why not face facts and go patriotic and turn over all those jalopies to make ammunition to shoot at the Germans and Japs? They are worth maybe $10 to $25 apiece; but millions of owners, if the game were once started, might take pleasure in giving them to Uncle Sam for nothing. The resulting glow of patriotism would be well worth the sacrifice. There might be honorable ribbons or buttons for such patriots, bearing the proud words, "I Gave a Car." And it would be wonderful to have the old wrecks off the streets and out of the farm yards.

HE NAMED AUGUST

ANY LIST of the world's great men, even as short as ten, would be pretty sure to include Augustus Caesar, emperor of Rome, born on September 23, B. C. 63 and dying 77 years later after a 41-year reign as the first of the Roman emperors.

In these troubled days we can appreciate the genius of a man who found the civilized European world torn asunder by civil war, who restored peace, order and prosperity, and established a government so strong that it was not seriously disturbed for nearly 200 years. That is a longer period than the life of the United States government. Though American believe in this country and hope for its future, they cannot, in the present year of troubles, be absolutely sure that it will survive. Such uncertainty helps in measuring the achievement of Augustus.

Not the least notable fact about him is the way in which he assured himself of immortality. In the old calendar there was a month Sextilis, meaning simply "sixth month." Augustus decreed that it should be called after himself. That is how the month of August appears in current calendars. With all this audacity, even Hitler has not yet disturbed the calendar to immortalize himself. He may hesitate to put himself on a par with the Emperor Augustus.

One job that somebody else can have: in South Africa small boys are said to make a living by stealing poisonous snakes from the Capetown Zoo, and then reselling them to that institution.

In Washington the people met in hotel lobbies know, or say they do, all the war secrets except one: how to get a room for the night.

WORLD AT A GLANCE

—By— Charles P. Stewart

WASHINGTON.—Uncle Sam's protest to Vichy against the conscription of French labor for work in Axis factories and on Axis farms represents a Yankee administration policy, of course. It's vocally expressed, however, by State Secretary Cordell Hull in conversation with Ambassador Gaston Henry-Haye in Washington, and, from all accounts, it wouldn't be a bit accurate to describe it as a diplomatic con-versation in tone.

Normally Cordell Hull is as mild-mannered an individual as ever occupied a seat in the house of representatives, then in the senate and finally took over the premier portfolio in the cabinet. As an orator, I've even heard him complained of, on the ground that he didn't raise his voice sufficiently to be adequately terrifying to folk in disagreement with him, or use language strong enough to make 'em cringe satisfactorily. Naturally he's argumentative in his style.

There's an old saying, though—"Beware the fury of a patient man!" Well, the story is that at last he's furious enough with Vichy to fill the bill, as per this proverbial warning.

Hill Opens Up

This chat he had with Gas Henry-Haye doesn't appear to have been formally official in character. Evidently it was a kind of a man-to-man affair. I've no idea that anyone listening at the keyhole could have overheard much of it, but I'd gamble that Gas' report of it to Pierre Laval was hot stuff in substance—and a lot of it.

Just what was said can't be largely guessed at. It wasn't a regularly arranged international conference. Cordell simply suggested to Gas that he wished the latter would drop in for a few minutes and talk, and I don't question that Cordell was perfectly proper in telling his visitor that the prospect for a break in relations between Washington and Vichy if the Vichy folk go ahead with what appears to be their present program. It must have been a difficult hint to convey in a social, friendly fashion, but Cordell's tactfulness is equal to almost anything.

French Gentiles and French Jews apparently fall into separate classifications. Herr Hitler wants 'em both, as civilian workers, to release Germans for military duty. Possibly, however, wasn't particularly his purpose to ill-treat the Gentile con-

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

MORGENTHAU DID GOOD JOB

WASHINGTON — When the history of this war is written, it will be found that the man who had most to do with getting real quantities of supplies to Russia was unobtrusive, harassed Henry Morgenthau.

Almost no one knows it outside the inner circle, but it was Morgenthau who finally got a statement in writing from the President saying that, with Hitler about to launch the biggest attack in history supplies to Russia must come first. This was around March 10 of this year.

Prior to that time, supplies to Russia had gone in dribbles. Australia was pressing its demands. Britain needed supplies for Egypt, India, the Dutch East Indies. China needed bombers. Russia had been solemnly promised munitions, but except in infinitesimal quantities, they were not shipped.

Everyone agreed that if Russia was able to hold this Summer, Hitler was well on the way to defeat. But ever so, Russia did not get the munitions.

So finally, Morgenthau put the matter flatly before the President and got a statement from him in writing. Incidentally, the President, through some whim, wrote his chit on an old piece of paper with the heading "Assistant Secretary of the Navy." He had kept it for 22 years, ever since the days of Woodrow Wilson.

Morgenthau then got the chit photostated and sent it around to the war chiefs. When Donald Nelson demurred over sending large supplies to Russia, Morgenthau simply said: "Well, here it is in writing."

Note—The nation can also thank Morgenthau for being more farsighted than anyone else in the cabinet about building planes for France and England. When a French pilot cracked up in California, Morgenthau was panned severely on the Senate floor and the Senate Military Affairs Committee proposed an investigation. Harry Woodring, the Secretary of War, also vigorously opposed Morgenthau.

However, these purchases by the French and British got U. S. airplane factories toiled up and ready for mass production. Morgenthau even went to Indianapolis and paid a surprise visit on the Allison Company, to see why its motor production was so slow.

NEW RUBBER CZAR

Inside fact is that the President offered Chester Davis, former AAA administrator, the job of being rubber czar before he offered it to Union Pacific's William M. Jeffers. But Davis, now head of the Federal Reserve Bank in St. Louis, has not been in good health and asked to be excused.

Faced with the necessity of getting a good man immediately (the appointment had been promised for September 14), Averell Harriman, chairman and chief stockholder of the Union Pacific, ordered Jeffers to Washington. He arrived on September 15 without any inkling of what was in store for him, was given thirty minutes to consider the matter, and accepted.

Things That May Cause Abscess of Middle Ear

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE EAR naturally divides itself into three main divisions—external, middle and internal. The external ear can be seen and known by us all. In the lower an-

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

mals it is an organ of expression and also serves as a sounding board to catch sound.

In man it has degenerated into a useless and rather ugly appendix to the scalp. Part of the external ear we discussed yesterday—the skin-lined canal which conducts sound waves to the drum.

The middle ear is a not entirely closed cavity which also selects and transmits sound waves to the internal ear, the organ of hearing. At one end of the middle ear is the ear drum and connected to it are three small bones movable on each other, the innermost of which is attached to a window which opens into the inner organ of hearing.

Sound waves impinge on the ear drum and make it vibrate. These vibrations are transmitted by the little ear bones to the organ of hearing. But in order for this apparatus to work, in order for sound to be transmitted, the middle ear must be an elastic air space connected with the external world.

So into the center of the middle ear and going to the back of the throat is an open canal, the Eustachian tube. If at the moment of a loud sound the pressure in the middle ear is too great, the Eustachian tube opens up and allows the air under pressure into the back of the throat. It is an absolutely necessary provision of nature, but it is the cause of all the origin of middle ear trouble.

Because the throat is constantly full of germs, some of them from time to time naturally wander up the Eustachian tube and light and make lodgment in the middle ear.

So, fundamentally, the way to prevent abscess of the middle ear is to safeguard the Eustachian tube. That is why the care of colds and sore throat is so important.

True, under most circumstances middle ear infection passes off in the course of a few days or weeks and does little harm. But it is always troublesome and may have complications that are very serious.

Mastoid

There is one other connection to the middle ear besides the Eustachian tube, and that is the mastoid collection of cells. Nobody knows exactly what they are there for, yet they can cause very serious trouble if they become infected from abscess of the middle ear. They lie close to the brain and to the great veins of the neck, and mastoid infection is likely to spread.

The doctor called to see a sore throat, and especially a children's doctor, has to keep all this series of events in mind. Every case of measles and scarlet fever is potentially an ear case because both of these diseases start with an intense throat inflammation.

Taken in time, however, there is nothing that responds better to intelligent treatment than a middle ear infection. It does not impair hearing, curiously enough, and with modern ear surgery it has become one of the most satisfactory diseases to treat.

M. L.: Is it possible to have adhesions show up in an X-ray of the right side of the abdomen?

Answer: Soft tissue, including adhesions, does not throw a shadow on the X-ray plate unless what is called contrast mediums are used. But these have not yet been applied to adhesions.

CHAPTER FORTY-ONE

ADDIE WAS waiting for Barbara to go on.

"Miss Addie, there are natural things that happen to almost every girl at the right time in her life, things like wanting to put on high heels and falling in love. Things that are bound to happen later if they don't happen when they should, when you're young and dreamy. Something like that happened to me."

Miss Addie had resumed her slow rocking, her eyes intent upon the speaker.

"I guess I've always been romantic, although I didn't know I was. Lonely little girls often are. I was lonely and used to read a lot. And wish a lot, too. I used to wish that when I grew up something would happen to me like . . ."

Well, the fairy prince. Someone who'd love me and would let me love him. I even had an image of what he'd be like, and how he'd talk and . . . oh, lots of little things that stand for kindness and tenderness and strength. I had a very deep affection for my husband, but we . . . he wasn't . . . that—"

"Fairy prince." Addie finished matter-of-factly.

Barbara nodded. "I suppose this sounds foolish to you."

Addie made a little clicking noise with her tongue, but her eyes were kindly and understanding and she said, "I was a girl once. And I've read a lot. My dear, it's not unusual. The psychologists say that every woman has a 'ghostly lover' somewhere in her make-up and she never loses him. That accounts for the movie idol's popularity with the most devoted housewife. . . . Is this what Tom Kilcran is—was—to you?"

Barbara felt as if her next breath was the first in a long time. She said, "Yes. That's exactly what he was. But I didn't realize it then. He doesn't know, nor does anyone else. We were only friends. Do you believe that?"

"I do. But my knowing doesn't wipe out your immediate problem." Barbara's relief was short lived. She said, "If I think I could get a job in a publishing house, but I don't want to leave here. I love every tree, every stone—"

"You're not going to leave."

Barbara's heart leaped with pure joy and sang with the canary in the dining room beyond. In that moment after Miss Addie spoke, Barbara became acutely aware of everything about her, the family portraits on the mantle, the fraying horsehair that covered the sofa, the giant conch shell on the marble-topped table; Tony's voice speaking into the telephone across the hall; the smell of gingerbread baking and freshly washed woodwork. She loved everything that she saw and heard and smelled.

Mostly, she loved Addie Bradshaw, peering at her from back of steel-rimmed spectacles and saying: "You'll have a long row to hoe. It will be like starting again. There isn't any way to stand before a court and be acquitted of something for which you have not been openly accused."

"I shan't mind that too much. Just tell me what to do."

"There isn't anything to do but use patience and courage and dignity and try to understand that you are—in a way—on trial, and innocent. And come to the Woman's club meeting on Thursday."

"I can't, Miss Addie, not knowing what they think of me."

"I intend to nominate you for the trusteeship," Addie said calmly, because she knew very well that her approval carried all the weight that was necessary.

They talked for a little while then of other things and when Barbara was leaving, Addie said, "Don't judge us too harshly, Mrs. Wister. We New Englanders are quick to judge, but we're just as quick to admit we're wrong when we are. This may seem like a tempest in a teapot to people who don't know us."

Barbara stopped her with a smile. "It's not a tempest in a teapot to me, Miss Addie. Nor would it be to anyone who knows that a whole moral standard is involved. A standard that I approve of, incidentally."

"You've got a real New England attitude, my dear. . . . You just remember that comforting things come out of every teapot, as well as tempests."

"Tapots?" Barbara said. "I've always loved them."

Miss Addie was literal; she said, "I want to show you one that Tony's great-grandmother brought from England. It's a wedgewood and has a mite of a crack, but it's the family treasure. Someday it will belong to Tony's wife."

Curving her fingers around the precious piece of china, Barbara thought of Tony's wife.

Claire Kilcran hadn't been in an attic since she was a child and now, mounting the stairs that led to the top floor of Stormwood, used as a storage place, she remembered her childhood horror of the attic in her father's old house. Fraulein Gottschacht, her first governess, had told her—dear God, how many years ago!—that every attic was filled with ghosts. The memory of a whispering voice, long since stilled, sent shivers down her spine and sped her thoughts back into forgotten years.

Of late her thoughts turned more often to the past than to the future, ever since those first few weeks when she had come back to Stormwood to feel it her home for the first time. It had come upon her with a kind of amazement that she should feel at home in the mansion Tom had built for her 17 years before and from which she had fled time and time again. When other women talked of their homes, she always said that she could never feel attached to any one place, that she had never known nostalgia for home or heartiness for any other women did. She must, as she said, always see new faces, be in new places. She loved trains, hotels, boats. They kept her young, she said, and not until she was old would she want to settle down and be a part of any thing of walls and hearthstone.

To be a part of this house that she was coming to love, to sit beside the hearthstone, this had come to her. But she was not old yet. It wasn't age that tarnished the glitter she had loved. What was it, then? The war, perhaps. And she was tired after the season when she brought Pamela back from the southwest.

"And angry and frightened," a small, sharp voice within her said.

She had been—a little. That was because she'd been so foolish about Nicky. Pam was right; she had been jealous, but it was something more than jealousy that Pam did not know about. Neither Pam nor Tom knew.

GIVE A CAR

PEOPLE may know, but are curiously slow to admit, that the most obvious source of scrap steel in this country is old autos. There is probably a ton of steel in each of them, and there must be at least 10,000,000 cars out of commission or ready for wrecking.

Why not face facts and go patriotic and turn over all those jalopies to make ammunition to shoot at the Germans and Japs? They are worth maybe $10 to $25 apiece; but millions of owners, if the game were once started, might take pleasure in giving them to Uncle Sam for nothing. The resulting glow of patriotism would be well worth the sacrifice. There might be honorable ribbons or buttons for such patriots, bearing the proud words, "I Gave a Car." And it would be wonderful to have the old wrecks off the streets and out of the farm yards.

HE NAMED AUGUST

ANY LIST of the world's great men, even as short as ten, would be pretty sure to include Augustus Caesar, emperor of Rome, born on September 23, B. C. 63 and dying 77 years later after a 41-year reign as the first of the Roman emperors.

In these troubled days we can appreciate the genius of a man who found the civilized European world torn asunder by civil war, who restored peace, order and prosperity, and established a government so strong that it was not seriously disturbed for nearly 200 years. That is a longer period than the life of the United States government. Though American believe in this country and hope for its future, they cannot, in the present year of troubles, be absolutely sure that it will survive. Such uncertainty helps in measuring the achievement of Augustus.

Not the least notable fact about him is the way in which he assured himself of immortality. In the old calendar there was a month Sextilis, meaning simply "sixth month." Augustus decreed that it should be called after himself. That is how the month of August appears in current calendars. With all this audacity, even Hitler has not yet disturbed the calendar to immortalize himself. He may hesitate to put himself on a par with the Emperor Augustus.

One job that somebody else can have: in South Africa small boys are said to make a living by stealing poisonous snakes from the Capetown Zoo, and then reselling them to that institution.

In Washington the people met in hotel lobbies know, or say they do, all the war secrets except one: how to get a room for the night.

WORLD AT A GLANCE

—By—
Charles P. Stewart

WASHINGTON.—Uncle Sam's protest to Vichy against the conscription of French labor for work in Axis factories and on Axis farms represents a Yankee administration policy, of course. It's vocally expressed, however, by State Secretary Cordell Hull, in conversation with Ambassador Gaston Henry-Haye in Washington, and, from all accounts, it wouldn't be a diplomatic conversation to describe it as a diplomatic conversation in tone.

Normally Cordell Hull is as mild-mannered an individual as ever occupied a seat in the house of representatives, then in the senate and finally took over the premier portfolio in the cabinet.

As an orator, I've even heard him complain of, on the ground that he didn't raise his voice sufficiently to be adequately terrifying to folk in disagreement with him, or use language strong enough to make 'em cringe satisfactorily. Naturally he's argumentative in his style.

There's an old saying, though—"Beware the fury of a patient man!"

Well, the story is that at last he's furious enough with Vichy to fill the bill, as per this proverbial warning.

Hull Opens Up

This chat he had with Gas Henry-Haye doesn't appear to have been formally official in character. Evidently it was a kind of a man-to-man affair. I've no idea that anyone listening at the keyhole could have overheard much of it, but I'd gamble that Gas' report of it to Pierre Laval was hot stuff in substance—and a lot of it.

Just what was said can't be largely guessed at. It wasn't a regularly arranged international conference. Cordell simply suggested to Gas that he wished the latter would drop in for a few minutes' talk, and I don't question that Cordell was perfectly polite in telling his visitor that the prospect for a break in relations between Washington and Vichy if the Vichy folk go ahead with what appears to be their present program. It must have been a difficult hint to convey in a social, friendly fashion, but Cordell's tactfulness is equal to almost anything.

French Gentiles and French Jews apparently fall into separate classifications. Herr Hitler wants 'em both, as civilian workers, to release Germans for military duty. Possibly, however, it wasn't particularly his purpose to ill-treat the Gentile contingent. He won't be overly decent to 'em, of course, but it isn't especially to MAL-treat 'em that he wants 'em delivered to him.

So far, then, as the Gentiles are concerned, their surrender to Pierre Laval to Adolf amounts only to military aid, surrendered to him.

And considering that we're at war with the Axis, this'll be equivalent to help for the Nazis, against us. That's a military proposition. It isn't sentimental.

Passing over Jews, though, to work as Nazi slaves, involves another consideration.

Labor and Death

They're labor also, but, in addition to that, the Nazis avowedly plan to persecute 'em—kill 'em maybe, when their labor utility's terminated—destroy 'em racially.

Secretary Hull is frank to say that this prospect scandalizes us. Darned if we'll stand for it on general principles, he informs Gas Henry-Haye.

Secretary Hull goes to the extent of doubting Vichy France's veracity. In short, he accuses the government there of lying.

Vichy says we can have France's Jews if we want 'em. Cordell answers that we've had no such offer from Vichy; he doesn't believe it.

Personally, I think a Jew is just like anybody—a Catholic (I'm one by marriage), or a Methodist (I'm one by heredity) or anybody.

MORGENTHAU DID GOOD JOB

WASHINGTON — When the history of this war is written, it will be found that the man who had most to do with getting real quantities of supplies to Russia was unobtrusive, harassed Henry Morgenthau.

Almost no one knows it outside the inner circle, but it was Morgenthau who finally got a statement in writing from the President saying that, with Hitler about to launch the biggest attack in history supplies to Russia must come first. This was around March 10 of this year.

Prior to that time, supplies to Russia had gone in dribbles. Australia was pressing its demands. Britain needed supplies for Egypt, India, the Dutch East Indies. China needed bombers. Russia had been solemnly promised munitions, but except in infinitesimal quantities, they were not shipped.

Everyone agreed that if Russia was able to hold this Summer, Hitler was well on the way to defeat. But ever so, Russia did not get the munitions.

So finally, Morgenthau put the matter flatly before the President and got a statement from him in writing. Incidentally, the President, through some whim, wrote his chit on an old piece of paper with the heading "Assistant Secretary of the Navy." He had kept it for 22 years, ever since the days of Woodrow Wilson.

Morgenthau then got the chit photostated and sent it around to the war chiefs. When Donald Nelson demurred over sending large supplies to Russia, Morgenthau simply said: "Well, here it is in writing."

Note—The nation can also thank Morgenthau for being more farsighted than anyone else in the cabinet about building planes for France and England. When a French pilot cracked up in California, Morgenthau was panned severely on the Senate floor and the Senate Military Affairs Committee proposed an investigation. Harry Woodring, the Secretary of War, also vigorously opposed Morgenthau.

However, these purchases by the French and British got U. S. airplane factories tooling up and ready for mass production. Morgenthau even went to Indianapolis and paid a surprise visit on the Allison Company, to see why its motor production was so slow.

NEW RUBBER CZAR

Inside fact is that the President offered Chester Davis, former AAA administrator, the job of being rubber czar before he offered it to Union Pacific's William M. Jeffers. But Davis, now head of the Federal Reserve Bank in St. Louis, has not been in good health and asked to be excused.

Faced with the necessity of getting a good man immediately (the appointment had been promised for September 14), Averell Harriman, chairman and chief stockholder of the Union Pacific, ordered Jeffers to Washington. He arrived on September 15 without any inkling of what was in store for him, was given thirty minutes to consider the matter, and accepted.

Things That May Cause Abscess of Middle Ear

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE EAR naturally divides itself into three main divisions—external, middle and internal. The external ear can be seen and known by us all. In the lower an-

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

mals it is an organ of expression and also serves as a sounding board to catch sound.

In man it has degenerated into a useless and rather ugly appendage to the scalp. Part of the external ear we discussed yesterday—the skin-lined canal which conducts sound waves to the drum.

The middle ear is not an entirely closed cavity which also selects and transmits sound waves to the internal ear, the organ of hearing. At one end of the middle ear is the ear drum and connected to it are three small bones movable on each other, the innermost of which is attached to a window which opens into the inner organ of hearing.

Sound waves impinge on the ear drum and make it vibrate. These vibrations are transmitted by the little ear bones to the organ of hearing. But in order for this apparatus to work, in order for sound to be transmitted, the middle ear must be an elastic air space connected with the external world.

So into the center of the middle ear and going to the back of the throat is an open canal, the Eustachian tube. If at the moment of a loud sound the pressure in the middle ear is too great, the Eustachian tube opens up and allows the air under pressure into the back of the throat. It is an absolutely necessary provision of nature, but it is the cause of all the origin of middle ear trouble.

Because the throat is constantly full of germs, some of them from time to time naturally wander up the Eustachian tube and light and make lodgement in the middle ear. So, fundamentally, the way to prevent abscess of the middle ear is to safeguard the Eustachian tube. That is why the care of colds and sore throat is so important.

True, under most circumstances middle ear infection passes off in the course of a few days or weeks and does little harm. But it is always troublesome and may have complications that are very serious.

Mastoid

There is one other connection to the middle ear besides the Eustachian tube, and that is the mastoid collection of cells. Nobody knows exactly what they are there for, yet they can cause very serious trouble if they become infected from abscess of the middle ear. They lie close to the brain and to the great veins of the neck, and mastoid infection is likely to spread.

The doctor called to see a sore throat, and especially a children's doctor, has to keep all this series of events in mind. Every case of measles and scarlet fever is potentially an ear case because both of these diseases start with an intense throat inflammation.

Taken in time, however, there is nothing that responds better to intelligent treatment than a middle ear infection. It does not impair hearing, curiously enough, and with modern ear surgery it has become one of the most satisfactory diseases to treat.

M. L.: Is it possible to have adhesions show up in an X-ray of the right side of the abdomen?

Answer: Soft tissue, including adhesions, does not throw a shadow on the X-ray plate unless what is called contrast medium is used. But these have not yet been applied to adhesions.

CHAPTER FORTY-ONE

ADDIE WAS waiting for Barbara to go on. "Miss Addie, there are natural things that happen to almost every girl at the right time in her life, things like wanting to put on high heels and falling in love. Things that are bound to happen later if they don't happen when they should, when you're young and dreamy. Something like that happened to me."

Miss Addie had resumed her slow rocking, her eyes intent upon the speaker.

"I guess I've always been romantic, although I didn't know I was. Lonely little girls often are. I was lonely and I used to read a lot. And wish a lot, too. I used to wish that when I grew up something would happen to me like . . . Well, the fairy prince. Someone who'd love me and would let me love him. I even had an image of what he'd be like, and how he'd talk and . . . oh, lots of little things that stand for kindness and tenderness and strength. I had a very deep affection for my husband, but we . . . he wasn't . . . that—"

"Fairy prince," Addie finished matter-of-factly.

Barbara nodded. "I suppose this sounds foolish to you."

Addie made a little clicking noise with her tongue, but her eyes were kindly and understanding and she said, "I was a girl once. And I've read a lot. My dear, it's not unusual. The psychologists say that every woman has a 'ghostly lover' somewhere in her makeup and she never loses him. That accounts for the movie idol's popularity with the most devoted housewife. . . . Is this what Tom Kilcran is—was—to you?"

Barbara felt as if her next breath was the first in a long time. She said, "Yes. That's exactly what he was. But I didn't realize it then. He doesn't know, nor does anyone else. We were only friends. Do you believe that?"

"I do. But my knowing doesn't wipe out your immediate problem."

Barbara's relief was short lived. She said, "I think I could get a job in a publishing house, but I don't want to leave here. I love every tree, every stone."

"You're not going to leave?" Barbara's heart leaped with pure joy and sang with the canary in the dining room beyond. In that moment after Miss Addie spoke, Barbara became acutely aware of everything about her, the family portraits on the mantle, the fraying horsehair that covered the sofa, the giant couch shell on the marble-topped table; Tony's voice speaking into the telephone across the hall; the smell of gingerbread baking and freshly washed woodwork. She loved everything that she saw and heard and smelled. Mostly, she loved Addie Bradshaw, peering at her from back of steel-rimmed spectacles and saying:

"You'll have a long row to hoe. It will be like starting again. There isn't any way to stand before a court and be acquitted of something for which you have not been openly accused."

"I shan't mind that too much. Just tell me what to do."

"There isn't anything to do but use patience and courage and dignity and try to understand that you are in a way on trial, and innocent. And come to the Woman's club meeting on Thursday."

"I can't, Miss Addie, not knowing what they think of me."

"I intend to nominate you for the trusteeship," Addie said calmly, because she knew very well that her approval carried all the weight that was necessary.

They talked for a little while then of other things and when Barbara was leaving, Addie said, "Don't judge us too harshly, Mrs. Wister. We New Englanders are quick to judge, but we're just as quick to admit we're wrong when we are. This may seem like a tempest in a teapot to people who don't know us."

Barbara stopped her with a smile. "It's not a tempest in a teapot to me, Miss Addie. Nor would it be to anyone who knows that a whole moral standard is involved. A standard that I approve of, incidentally."

"You've got a real New England attitude, my dear. . . . You just remember that comforting things come out of every teapot, as well as tempests."

"Teapots?" Barbara said. "I've always loved them."

Miss Addie was literal; she said, "I want to show you one that Tony's great-grandmother brought from England. It's a wedgewood and has a mite of a crack, but it's the family treasure. Someday it will belong to Tony's wife."

Curving her fingers around the precious piece of china, Barbara thought of Tony's wife.

Claire Kilcran hadn't been in an attic since she was a child and now, mounting the stairs that led to the top floor of Stormwood, used as a storage place, she remembered her childhood horror of the attic in her father's old house. Fraulein Gottschacht, her first governess, had told her—dear God, how many years ago—that every attic was filled with ghosts. The memory of a whispering voice, long since stilled, sent shivers down her spine and sped her thoughts back into forgotten years.

Of late her thoughts turned more often to the past than to the future, ever since those first few weeks when she had come back to Stormwood to feel it her home for the first time. It had come upon her with a kind of amazement that she should feel at home in the mansion Tom had built for her 17 years before and from which she had fled time and time again. When other women talked of their homes, she always said that she could never feel attached to any one place, that she had never known nostalgia for home or hearth-ties as other women did. She must, she said, always see new faces, be in new places. She loved trains, hotels, boats. They kept her young, she said, and not until she was old would she want to settle down and be a part of any thing of walls and hearthstones.

To be a part of this house that she was coming to love, to sit beside the hearthstone, this had come to her. But she was not old yet. It wasn't that that tarnished the glitter she had loved. What was it, then? The war, perhaps. And she was tired after the season when she brought Pamela back from the southwest.

"And angry and frightened," a small, sharp voice within her said. She had been—a little. That was because she'd been so foolish about Nicky. Pam was right; she had been jealous, but it was something more than jealousy that Pam did not know about. Neither Pam nor Tom knew.

CHILD LEAGUE CONTRIBUTES $80 TO CHEST FUND

Child Conservation League opened its Fall series of meetings Tuesday with an outstanding session at the home of Mrs. Robert Musser, Northridge road. Twenty-two members were present for the affair which opened with a Victory luncheon, the V motif being used in all the decorations and for the centerpiece of colorful vegetables on the buffet table. Foods served at the luncheon were attractively arranged in the V setting.
Mrs. Harry Heffner, incoming president, conducted the business session when the league voted $80 to the Pickaway County Community Chest. Mrs. Lemuel Weldon reported as treasurer. Mrs. Tom Renick of the Circleville Recreation committee reported on the work being done in the community for the entertainment of soldiers.

Mrs. Virgil M. Cress, speaker of the afternoon, was presented by Mrs. Ted Huston, chairman of the program committee. Mrs. Cress used the subject, "No Sugar, No Spice, but Everything Nice."

Her timely paper dealt with nutritional menus for adults and children. She announced that winning the War was everyone's part and that women might do their share by keeping the families healthy and happy. She discussed hunger as two kinds, quantity hunger and quality hunger, the one we are now becoming preoccupied with as responsible for malnutrition. Mrs. Cress offered suggestions on ways women may help, one being by planning weekly menus and the other by buying wisely and using two shopping days each week for food. She advised using less expensive cuts of meat and to use fish and poultry as frequent substitutes and to use smaller fruits as an economy measure.

Mrs. Cress encouraged the group to use new methods in cooking and stressed the need for school lunches in Circleville.

The weekly dramatization of the war news also includes the story of how the Pacific Clipper, damaged off the African coast, got back to New York with her hull patched with 1,500 pounds of concrete. Other scenes on the program, produced by factory and office workers at the Curtiss-Wright warplane plant here, include the smashing Nazi air attack on Stalingrad and the story of how two Dutch youths fooled a Nazi officer into paying their way to Great Britain so they could join the Royal Air Force.

KAY AT LABOR RALLY
Kay Kyser, who has covered service bases all over the country, will start a series of labor rallies. The first will be at the Lockheed aviation plant in Burbank, Calif., September 24 immediately after he does a broadcast from there for "Spotlight Bands" on the Blue network. ASHVILLE

Yesterday was Tuesday, September 22, and the last factory corn canning of the pack of 1942. About the lima bean pack, a finish will be made in a few days. The quality and quantity both, have exceeded all others in recent years. About 35 percent of this pack is for government use. The beginning of the pumpkin pack is but a few days ahead, a start being made sometime during next week. These statements were obtained from the boss, Meinhard Crites himself.

At the meeting of the village council Monday evening with full force in attendance, bills were paid amounting to $124.80. Up to this time the village treasury is $500 richer from cash received from trailer car rental at the park. Too, the council ordered bicycle racks placed at the large A. B. Cooper, cement space at the old hotel corner on Long street and which is to be roped off for protection. Bicycle riders when not on their mounts and in the central section of the village, are asked by Mayor Hines to make use of these racks both for convenience and safety. And more, through action of the council a volunteer extension fire department to the number of 18 or 20 members, headed by Fire Chief Hoadley Brintlinger, is now in process of organization. All members of this new larger organization are required to receive first aid instruction. O. J. Ward who instructed other classes, will be in charge of this one.

Just in case you should notice a fine little gold badge located upon the lapel of deputy marshal Cecil Scott's coat, the insignia does not mean a thing new or bad at all, but indicates that he is a member of the U. S. Marine Corps League with headquarters in Memorial hall, Columbus. This organization came into being in August, 1937, by an act of Congress. Meetings are held once each month.

Harry and Mrs. Hampson will celebrate their 60th wedding anniversary, Sunday, September 27, with open house at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Sadie Toy, 1268 City Park avenue, Columbus. Their residence for a long while has been in Ashville but recently have been making their home with the daughter named here. The Hampsons are 85 and 83 years young. They have five living children, eight grandchildren and one great grandchild. Two children are well known here, Mr. Hampson at one time being a member of the local school board.

The Parent-Teacher Association will hold at the school building Thursday evening, the first meeting of the school year. A splendid program has been arranged by the committee in charge. We are requested to announce that small

Husband a Stranger

Recovering her memory after suffering from amnesia for nearly a year, Mrs. Henry Helwagen, 25, above, discovered in Hollywood that she is married to a man whom she says she does not know, Henry Miller, a commercial photographer. She apparently lost her memory when she came home, Nov. 4, 1941, to find her then-husband, A. Pierce Weller, dead. She and Miller were married in Las Vegas, Nev., last May 1. Now Mrs. Miller says she remembers nothing about her marriage or her husband. "I can't stay with someone I don't know," she declared.

NATIONAL LOOP CHASE MOVING NEAR ITS END

Dodgers And Cardinals Win, St. Louis Retaining Its Two And Half Margin

By Jack Mahon

NEW YORK, Sept. 23—Brooklyn Dodgers may not win the National league pennant this year and though there are dark clouds all around Ebbets field, you can't take it away from the Bums—they won't give up hope until their dying gasp.

Yesterday, after spotting their hated rivals the lead twice, once by no less than four runs, Brooklyn came from the very brink of mathematical elimination from the race, to beat the New York Giants, 9 to 8, in 12 innings. Dolf Camilli proved the hero with a home run, his 25th of the year, over the center field scoreboard.

While their gallant uphill fight kept them hanging on the narrow ledge when a slip would send them hurtling out of the flag race, Brooklyn failed to gain on the St. Louis Cardinals whose 9 to 3 conquest of the Pirates kept them two and one half games in front. Though St. Louis, too, came from behind, thanks to a six run uprising in the fifth inning, eight of their nine runs were unearned, thanks to five butter-finger Pirate errors which drove their Manager Frank Frisch into a near-apoplectic stroke.

Stan Musial was the hero of the Card cause. A bonehead play by Gustine, following Kurovski's single and what should have been a force out by Marion put two men on for the St. Louis lads in the fifth. They were trailing, 3-0, at the time and the scoreboard showed the Dodgers had rallied to take a 7-5 lead over the Giants.

Sanders batted for Pitcher Gumbert and fled out but Brown was safe on Gustine's second misplay of the frame, filling the bases. Walker singled Kurovski home. When Sewell erred on Fletcher's toss of Slaughter's grounder, Marion rolled home.

That brought up Musial who promptly cleaned the sacks with a smash over the right field wall. That was all St. Louis needed to win but they added three more in the sixth, just to make it certain. After the Giants had built up a 4-0 lead with runs in the first, third and fourth frames, the Dodgers fought back in the ball game, when they learned St. Louis was trailing the Pirates, with a four run uprising of their own in the fourth inning.

Herman's double, a wild throw by Bartell, on Medwick's grounder, Camilli's single and Owen's walk brought in a run and left the bases filled. Reese's long fly out scored Medwick and Vaughan's single brought home Dolf and Mickey.

The Giants put over another to take the lead again in the fifth but in the seventh, Herman again sparked the drive that put the Flatbusher's back in the ball game. After Vaughan walked and Macon sacrificed, Dixie Walker also walked. Herman slammed his third double to right scoring Arky and sending Dixie to third. Reiser's single through the infield sent both boys home and the Dodgers into the lead for the first time.

New York, desperately trying to knock their rivals out of the race, tied the score and went ahead for the third time in the ninth with a three run spurge on Witke's walk, Ott's single, Mize's double, Vaughan's infield out and Maynard's single.

But Brooklyn wouldn't give up. Pinch-hitter Sullivan walked, Robjek running for him, and Carpenter replacing McGee on the mound for the Giants. He was their fifth hurler.

Walker sacrificed then Riggs batted for Herman and singled Robjek home with the tying run. Big Dolf did the rest.

Reds Win Pair

In the other National league games the Cincinnati Reds twice beat the Chicago Cubs, 3-1 while in the American loop the champion Yankees topped the Washington Senators 3-1 and Detroit trounced the Chicago White Sox 9-2.

Paul Brown Could Use Martins Ferry's Groza

By Rodger Nelson

COLUMBUS, Sept. 23—A Full-

Nelson on Sports:

Coach Paul Brown of Ohio State was bemoaning the fact that freshmen are not eligible for varsity competition in the Western Conference this Fall after watching Lou "Chief" Groza of Martins Ferry split the uprisings in a brilliant place kicking exhibition the other evening. . . . Groza, all-state in football and basketball, is rarin' to go at the Buckeye school, where he is enrolled as a freshman.

One of Brown's main problems this year is a place kicker and the Martins Ferry lad on a kickoff formation booted one through the goal posts—70 yards away. . . . Groza also contributed two field goals from the 40-yard line out of three attempts.

Painesville's 57-0 conquest on Erie Cathedral Prep was the most decisive victory scored as the majority of Ohio's scholastic football teams launched campaigns last week end. . . . Dayton Oakwood stood next with a 52-0 edge over Greenville.

The longest run of the week old season is accredited Frank Entriken of Salem high school on a "freak" play. . . . An invader pass was taken on the Salem 10-yard line and when the ball-tofer was about to be downed, he lateraled and Entriken intercepted the throw on his own five-yard stripe and streaked 95 yards for the score. . . . Final score, Salem, 19; Sebring, 0.

A 90-yard sprint by Jim Young Sparked Loudonville to a 20-0 victory over Danville for another offensive gem.

Beulah Park is in the last week of its regular Fall meeting but will have two extra days of racing next Monday and Tuesday with all proceeds being turned over to Army and Navy relief. . . . The $1,500 Ohio Horse Breeders Stake race for two-year olds at a distance of six furlongs will feature Saturday's program.

No sooner will the Grove City oval close its doors than Ascot Park at Akron opens its portals. . . . Ascot has a two-week Fall

By Roger Nelson

COLUMBUS, Sept. 23.—A Full Nelson on Sports:

Coach Paul Brown of Ohio State was bemoaning the fact that freshmen are not eligible for varsity competition in the Western Conference this Fall after watching Lou "Chief" Groza of Martins Ferry split the uprisings in a brilliant place kicking exhibition the other evening. . . . Groza, all-state in football and basketball, is rarin' to go at the Buckeye school, where he is enrolled as a freshman.

One of Brown's main problems this year is a place kicker and the Martins Ferry lad on a kickoff formation booted one through the goal posts—70 yards away. . . . Groza also contributed two field goals from the 40-yard line out of three attempts.

Painesville's 57-0 conquest on Erie Cathedral Prep was the most decisive victory scored as the majority of Ohio's scholastic football teams launched campaigns last week end. . . . Dayton Oakwood stood next with a 52-0 edge over Greenville.

The longest run of the week old season is accredited Frank Entriaken of Salem high school on a "freak" play. . . . An invader pass was taken on the Salem 10-yard line and when the ball-toter was about to be downed, he lateraled the throw on his own five-yard stripe and streaked 95 yards for the score. . . . Final score, Salem, 19; Sebring, 0.

A 90-yard sprint by Jim Young Sparked Loudonville to a 20-0 victory over Danville for another offensive gem.

Beulah Park is in the last week of its regular Fall meeting but will have two extra days of racing next Monday and Tuesday with all proceeds being turned over to Army and Navy relief. . . . The $1,500 Ohio Horse Breeders Stake race for two-year olds at a distance of six furlongs will feature Saturday's program.

No sooner will the Grove City oval close its doors than Ascot Park at Akron opens its portals. . . . Ascot has a two-week Fall meeting planned starting Saturday, October 3. . . . President Dan Cronin already reports an overflow of horses for available stable accommodations.

The Xavier-Kentucky gridiron clash in Xavier stadium should be a "lulu." . . . Both elevens employ the "T" formation and both have proven their worth as gridiron powers with impressive debuts in season inaugurals last Saturday. . . . Kentucky throttled Georgia down to a 7-6 margin of victory while the Musketeers edged Butler, 21-14. . . . The Wildcats will outweigh the host team close to 10 pounds per man on the forward wall.

Duck Season Near

Saturday will mark the opening of duck season which has added 10 days to last year's period. . . . Dates for the season this year are September 26-December 4 while last year's dates were October 1-November 29. . . . Hunting hours are sunrise to sunset and the daily bag limit is 10 with minimum possession of 20 after the first day.

Madeleine Urbas fired 11 strikes, eight in succession, the other evening to establish a new high for Lorain women bowlers with a score of 278. . . . On her ninth pitch, after the eight strikes, she took a nine-pin count and turned in the spare.

When Wooster and John Carroll clash Saturday in the former's city, it will mark the second time that the two teams have ever met.

Last game was in Cleveland when John Carroll edged the Scots, 20-13. . . . That game, incidentally, is the only night game a Wooster team has ever participated in.

Some 13,352 rabid fans turned out to see Massillon go through its 44th consecutive game without defeat. . . . The Tigers downed Cleveland Cathedral Latin, 38-0, amassing 15 first downs to three for the visitors. . . . Massillon downed the same team last year, 39-0.

Massillon's new coach, Elwood Kammer, is a little pessimistic about his game with Weirton this Friday. . . . Scouting the West Virginia team, Kammer and his assistants left when the score was 35-0, Weirton. . . . "They are really tough" was his only comment.

The Wooster-Barberton game was dedicated to Col. Frank Goettge of the U. S. Marine Corps. . . . Goettge, a former Barberton student, was recently announced as killed in action by the Navy department. . . . Barberton won the game, 12-6.

Frank Richey, who two years ago at 138 pounds was the lightest man on the Ohio State varsity, streaked 70 yards for a score in a scrimmage as Ohio Wesleyan prepared for their season liftdier against Albion, Mich., Saturday. . . . Richey was behind Ohio State's Captain Jim Langhurst and he is now playing quarterback behind the Bishop's captain, Bill Watkins.

CORNELL CAPTAIN QUILTS TO ENTER ARMED RANKS

ITHACA, N. Y., Sept. 23.—The Cornell football team was without the services today of Ken Stofor, captain and fullback. Stofor withdrew from college to enter the Army. His departure left Coach Carl Snavely with only two regulars from his 1941 team.

CLAIM SERVICE TITLE

SCOTT FIELD, Ill.,—Scott Field, called the radio university of the U. S. Army Air Force, claims it has the champion officer softball team of the nation's Armed Forces. The team's pitcher is Col. Wolcott Hayes, commanding officer of Scott Field, who is currently riding the crest of a 12-game winning streak. Col. Hayes and his teammates have won three officer league titles this summer, and their recent victory was an 18-3 shellacking administered to the Chanute Field, Ill., officers' squad.

GOPHERS, IRISH RATE STRONGEST IN MIDDLEWEST

By Al B. Gregory
CHICAGO, Sept. 23.—The University of Minnesota and the University of Notre Dame today appeared to be the class of the Midwest collegiate football world for 1942.

The Gophers thus are pegged to retain their Western Conference title and Notre Dame, in the opinion of experts, is headed for the No. 1 spot on the gridiron horizon of the middlewest.

The Irish, despite Coach Frank Leahy's fretting, seem to have retained enough power to challenge any team for the mythical national title.

Of the two teams, Notre Dame has selected for itself the heavier schedule, meeting Wisconsin, Georgia Tech, Stanford, Iowa Sea-hawks, Illinois, U. S. Military Academy, Michigan, Northwestern, Southern California and Great Lakes.

The Minnesota schedule includes games with Pittsburgh, Iowa Sea-hawks, Illinois, Nebraska, Michigan, Northwestern, Indiana, Iowa and Wisconsin.

If the respective top-notch aggregations can sail through their schedules without defeat, there can be little doubt that their title claims will be well deserved.

Minnesota, Northwestern and Michigan will carry the brunt on the Big Ten schedules.

But something new has been added for the 1942 football fan.

This year it's the addition of two service teams—the Iowa Sea-hawks, coached by Lt. Col. Bernie Bierman, formerly of Minnesota, and the Great Lakes Naval training station team, coached by Lt. Tony Hinkle.

The performance of the Sea-hawks last week in routing Kansas 61 to 0, bows the sailors in as no soft touch for any of the conference contenders.

City Schools Contribute $2800 to Community Chest

HIGH ATHLETIC GROUP VOTES GIFT OF $500

Educational Institutions Far Surpass Early Estimates On Donation Total

DRIVE TIME EXTENDED

Director Fischer Asks New Deadline Now Set For First Of October

Circleville schools went "all out" for the Pickaway county Community Chest this week when contributions and pledges totalling $2,800 were reported to Superintendent Frank Fischer, general chairman of the Community Chest campaign.

The total reached by contributions of the teachers, various classes and organizations surpassed earlier estimates made by educators.

At the same time that the report was made concerning the school's, Superintendent Fischer announced that solicitors had requested that the campaign, scheduled to end this week, be continued until October 1. At a meeting of the trustees held Tuesday evening it was voted to approve the request.

The Community Chest is seeking $49,680.

Leading the contribution and pledge list in the county schools was the High School Athletic Association which voted $500 to the Chest. The association for the first time in some years, largely because of successful football seasons in the last few years, is out of debt. The pledge made by the association spearheaded the school's effort to boost the Community Chest fund.

All buildings contributed heavily to the fund teachers and pupils adding their money to the total.

School organization contributions were reported by Mr. Fischer as follows: bands, $125; Epsilon Mu Sigma, honorary English society, $10; glee clubs, $70; Hi-Y, $50; Junior Girl Reserves, $25; Senior Girl Reserves, $25; Stooze club, $200.

Various schools and classes reported as follows: Corwin street pupils and teachers, $275; Franklin street pupils and teachers, $225; Walnut street pupils and teachers, $125; teachers, not included in above, $295; eighth grade pupils, $15; freshman class, $130; sophomore class, $85; junior class, $186, and senior class, $226.

Campaign in county rural schools was being conducted Wednesday.

Pictured making an address at the American Legion Convention in Kansas City, Mo., is Lieut. Gen. Ben Lear, commander of the Second Army. He told Legionnaires that the war will be won not by the use of bombing planes alone, but only when "the German and the Jap have learned to fear their sure and inevitable end at the point of an American bayonet." This is a photo.

LESTER COEY MAY SPEND LONG TIME IN JAIL

Lester Coey, 32, of Ashville Route 2, is under arrest in Circleville jail on a series of charges which may keep him in jail for a long while. Coey, whose driver's rights were suspended last February 8, was nabbed Tuesday night by Circleville police after his automobile struck two cars in the city, causing damage to both.

Charges which may be pressed against him, Police Chief W. F. McCrady said, included driving when intoxicated, leaving the scene of an accident and driving without a license.

His car struck the parked automobile of Wilson Woods, 26, in front of the Woods home, 507 East Mound street, and then hit the automobile of Caddy Barnes on Walnut street a short time later. Police caught Coey at the south end of Pickaway street.

Under his previous conviction for driving when intoxicated, Coey would not have been permitted to drive until March, 1943. He was arrested at that time after a collision in Walnut township.

Another accident in which no one was injured happened on Walnut street Tuesday afternoon when the automobile of Miss Florence Brown, Ashville Route 2, a Circleville teacher, and the taxi-cab driven by Veri Keaton, 159 York street, collided. The accident happened, police said, when Miss Brown started to drive away from the curbing, fenders of the two vehicles hooking.

NEGLECT ALLEGED

Charging gross neglect, Mrs. Estella Rambo of Circleville filed divorce action Wednesday in Pickaway county common pleas court against George Rambo. They were married in Circleville December 24, 1939, and have no children. Mrs. Rambo asks that her maiden name of Kuhn be restored to her.

Cartomancy Pays Big Dividends To Aronson

The word "cartomancy" may not mean much to most of us, but to Norman Aronson of New York City, native of Circleville and resident here until a year or so ago when he started to appear in some of the East's and South's leading social centers, it means bread and butter.

Norman is an expert in "divination in cartomancy". And he has clippings from some of the most famed "spots" on the east coast and in Florida showing that his work has been successful.

A "streamlined prestidigitator", that's another of his titles, and the card carrying his inscription goes on to say that he is a sleight of hand artist who foretells your future "should you desire sensational revelations and the unknown brought to life."

He appeared at Dempsey's Pago Pago room in Miami Beach, in the Vanderbilt hotel in the same resort city, in the Revere room of the Hotel Lexington, New York; the Hotel Chesterfield, New York, and numerous other centers of entertainment.

Clippings from several eastern newspapers praise him for his work, the Miami Daily News declaring: "He has had more than 20 predictions of marriage, trips and bequests come true this Summer, but he stoutly maintains fortune-telling is the bunk." The newspaper quoted the entertainer as saying: "This is solely entertainment and if any predictions come true it is pure coincidence."

Jack Kofoed in his column, "The Night Watch", in the Miami Daily News gave Norman a big send off, leading his column December 5, 1941, with an article concerning his ability to entertain customers at Dempsey's.

Young Aronson started doing card tricks a good many years ago, and has gradually developed his ability into an art.

Pickaway county Selective Service board believes that he may be able to tell Der Fuehrer's fortune, but with a rifle instead of a deck of cards, because Norman returned to Circleville Tuesday preparatory to leaving as a draftee for an examination before the Army medical team in Columbus. Whether Norman knows anything about his own future might be decided when he appears before the medicals. "I'll make it," Norman said Wednesday, "and then return to New York for my 14-day furlough." He didn't say whether the cards told him he would pass the examination.

He is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Aronson, both Circleville residents many years.

City Schools Contribute $2800 to Community Chest

HIGH ATHLETIC GROUP VOTES GIFT OF $500

Educational Institutions Far Surpass Early Estimates On Donation Total

DRIVE TIME EXTENDED

Director Fischer Asks New Deadline Now Set For First Of October

Circleville schools went "all out" for the Pickaway county Community Chest this week when contributions and pledges totalling $2,800 were reported to Superintendent Frank Fischer, general chairman of the Community Chest campaign.

The total reached by contributions of the teachers, various classes and organizations surpassed earlier estimates made by educators.

At the same time that the report was made concerning the schools, Superintendent Fischer announced that solicitors had requested that the campaign, scheduled to end this week, be continued until October 1. At a meeting of the trustees held Tuesday evening it was voted to approve the request.

The Community Chest is seeking $49,680.

Leading the contribution and pledge list in the county schools was the High School Athletic Association which voted $500 to the Chest. The association for the first time in some years, largely because of successful football seasons in the last few years, is out of debt. The pledge made by the association spearheaded the school's effort to boost the Community Chest fund.

All buildings contributed heavily to the fund teachers and pupils adding their money to the total.

School organization contributions were reported by Mr. Fischer as follows: bands, $125; Franklin street pupils and teachers, $225; Walnut street pupils and teachers, $125; teachers, not included in above, $295; eighth grade pupils, $15; freshman class, $130; sophomore class, $85; junior class, $186, and senior class, $226.

Campaign in county rural schools was being conducted Wednesday.

Legion Hears Lear

Pictured making an address at the American Legion Convention in Kansas City, Mo., is Lieut. Gen. Ben Lear, commander of the Second Army. He told Legionnaires that the war will be won not by the use of bombing planes alone, but only when "the German and the Jap have learned to fear their sure and inevitable end at the point of an American bayonet." This is a photo.

LESTER COEY MAY SPEND LONG TIME IN JAIL

Lester Coey, 32, of Ashville Route 2, is under arrest in Circleville jail on a series of charges which may keep him in jail for a long while. Coey, whose driver's rights were suspended last February 8, was nabbed Tuesday night by Circleville police after his automobile struck two cars in the city, causing damage to both.

Charges which may be pressed against him, Police Chief W. F. McCrady said, included driving when intoxicated, leaving the scene of an accident and driving without a license.

His car struck the parked automobile of Wilson Woods, 26, in front of the Woods home, 507 East Mound street, and then hit the automobile of Caddy Barnes on Walnut street a short time later. Police caught Coey at the south end of Pickaway street.

Under his previous conviction for driving when intoxicated, Coey would not have been permitted to drive until March, 1943. He was arrested at that time after a collision in Walnut township.

Another accident in which no one was injured happened on Walnut street Tuesday afternoon when the automobile of Miss Florence Brown, Ashville Route 2, a Circleville teacher, and the taxicab driven by Veri Keaton, 159 York street, collided. The accident happened, police said, when Miss Brown started to drive away from the curbing, fenders of the two vehicles hooking.

NEGLECT ALLEGED

Charging gross neglect, Mrs. Estella Rambo of Circleville filed divorce action Wednesday in Pickaway county common pleas court against George Rambo. They were married in Circleville December 24, 1939, and have no children. Mrs. Rambo asks that her maiden name of Kuhn be restored to her.

For Christmas presents, how about War Bonds?

Cartomancy Pays Big Dividends To Aronson

The word "cartomancy" may not mean much to most of us, but to Norman Aronson of New York City, native of Circleville and resident here until a year or so ago when he started to appear in some of the East's and South's leading social centers, it means bread and butter.

Norman is an expert in "divination in cartomancy". And he has clippings from some of the most famed "spots" on the east coast and in Florida showing that his work has been successful.

A "streamlined prestidigitator", that's another of his titles, and the card carrying his inscription goes on to say that he is a sleight of hand artist who foretells your future "should you desire sensational revelations and the unknown brought to life."

He appeared at Dempsey's Pago Pago room in Miami Beach, in the Vanderbilt hotel in the same resort city, in the Revere room of the Hotel Lexington, New York; the Hotel Chesterfield, New York, and numerous other centers of entertainment.

Clippings from several eastern newspapers praise him for his work, the Miami Daily News declaring: "He has had more than 20 predictions of marriage, trips and bequests come true this Summer, but he stoutly maintains fortune-telling is the bunk." The newspaper quoted the entertainer as saying: "This is solely entertainment and if any predictions come true it is pure coincidence."

Jack Kotoed in his column, "The Night Watch", in the Miami Daily News gave Norman a big send off, leading his column December 5, 1941, with an article concerning his ability to entertain customers at Dempsey's.

Young Aronson started doing card tricks a good many years ago, and has gradually developed his ability into an art.

Pickaway county Selective Service board believes that he may be able to tell Dr. Fuhrer's fortune, but with a rifle instead of a deck of cards, because Norman returned to Circleville Tuesday preparatory to leaving as a draftee for an examination before the Army medical team in Columbus. Whether Norman knows anything about his own future might be decided when he appears before the medicals. "I'll make it," Norman said Wednesday, "and then return to New York for my 14-day furlough." He didn't say whether the cards told him he would pass the examination.

He is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Aronson, both Circleville residents many years.

Some Americans are so disgusted with France they won't drink Vichy water.
